

NORSOPOLY

by Donna Whitlock

Astrid, Björn, Canute and Dagna are playing the traditional Viking game of Norsopoly, buying various interesting things along the way.

Norsopoly is very similar to the current United States edition of Monopoly and follows the same rules, including the following:

- Each player starts with $1500.
- On each turn, players roll 2 dice to determine how many spaces they move.
- If a player rolls doubles, they are allowed to roll again on the same turn.
- If a player lands on "Go to Gaol", they must go to Gaol and must stay there until they roll doubles. They move the spaces indicated by the dice roll and are not permitted to roll again on the same turn.

The following facts hold true for each round of play:

During each round, Astrid goes first, followed by Bjorn then Canute then Dagna.

Each player purchases any property, trailroad or utility that they land on.

No player lands on a property, trailroad or utility owned by another player.

Players roll doubles only where explicitly indicated.

Round 1

Astrid rolls an odd number.

Bjorn rolls doubles and then goes again, ending the round with $1100.

Canute buys a property for half the cost of what Astrid buys in this round.

Dagna buys a purple property.

Round 2

Astrid does not buy anything and is furthest around the board at end of this round.

Bjorn has $920 at the end of this round.

Canute is exactly half as far around the board as Astrid at the end of this round.

Dagna buys another purple property.

Round 3

Astrid has $1120 at the end of this round.

Bjorn rolls exactly half what Astrid did for this round.

Canute rolls an odd number.

Dagna is the same distance as Bjorn from Go at the end of this round.

Round 4

Astrid has bought a total of 2 items during the game by the end of this round.

Bjorn ends this round one square behind the square that Astrid landed on.

Canute buys nothing this round.

Dagna lands on a red property.

Round 5

Astrid rolls doubles and buys a property.

Bjorn rolls doubles to buy a brown property and then buys no other property in this round.

Canute lands on a red property and has $1080 by the end of this round.

Dagna buys a trailroad.
